UN Inspection Team Heads To Ukraine Nuclear Plant Despite Shelling

UKRAINE: (AGENCY)

UN inspectors pressed on towards a Russian-held nuclear plant in southern Ukraine Thursday despite an early shelling attack, as the IAEA warned the consequences of a strike on the facility could be "catastrophic". Just before the 14-strong team from International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) left for the Zaporizhzhia nuclear plant, Ukraine said Russian troops had shelled the town next door. The area around the plant - Europe's largest nuclear facility -- has suffered repeated shelling, with both sides accusing the other of responsibility, sparking global concern over the risk of an accident.

"It is high time to stop playing with fire and instead take concrete measures to protect this facility, from any military operation," IAEA chief Robert Mardini told reporters in Kyiv. "The slightest miscalculation could trigger devastation that we will regret for decades." Ukraine's nuclear agency Energoatom said later that one of the six reactors at the Russian-held nuclear plant was shut down Thursday as an emergency protection measure following the shelling in the area. "Today at 4:57 am (0157 GMT), due to another mortar shelling by the Russian occupying forces at the Zaporizhzhia nuclear power plant site, the emergency protection was activated and operating power unit 5 was shut down," it said. Mardini said it was "encouraging" that the IAEA team was en route to inspect the plant because the stakes were "immense". "When hazardous sites become battlegrounds, the consequences for millions of people and the environment can be catastrophic and last many years," he said. Just before leaving the southern city of Zaporizhzhia, IAEA chief Rafael Grossi said his team had been updated about the shelling but would press on anyway. "We are not stopping," he vowed, despite being aware that crossing the frontline into Russian-held territory, there was a security "grey area, where the risks are significant". "I believe we have to proceed with this. We have a very important mission to accomplish." Earlier, the mayor of Energodar, the town next to the plant, said it had come under sustained attack early on Thursday. In an 8:00 am (0500 GMT) update on Telegram, Mayor Dmytro Orlov said that since dawn, Russian troops had "shelled Energodar with mortars and used automatic weapons and rockets," posting images of damaged buildings and spiralling smoke. But Moscow accused Kyiv of smuggling in up to 60 military "saboteurs", saying they reached the area near the plant just after dawn and that Russian troops had taken "measures to annihilate the enemy". Both Moscow and Kyiv have accused each other of staging "provocations" aimed at disrupting the work of the IAEA mission. "Sadly, Russia is not stopping its provocations precisely in the direction the mission needs to travel to reach the plant," President Volodymyr Zelenskyy said late Tuesday after meeting Grossi. And in Moscow, the Russian defence ministry accused Kyiv of "continued provocations aimed at disrupting the work of the IAEA mission" saying it had shelled the area around the plant on Tuesday hitting a building containing "the solid radioactive waste processing complex". Counteroffensive in the south Meanwhile, intensive fighting raged across the southern region of Kherson where Ukraine began a counteroffensive on Monday.

Californians Told Not To Charge Electric Cars As Heatwave Singes State

LOS ANGELES: (AGENCY)

Californians were told Wednesday not to charge their electric vehicles during peak hours, just days after the state said it would stop selling gas-powered cars, as the aging electricity grid struggles with a fearsome heatwave. Temperatures as high as 112 degrees Fahrenheit (44 degrees Celsius) were forecast in some Los Angeles suburbs as a huge heat dome bakes a swathe of the western United States. The sweltering weather will put huge demands on the already-stretched power grid, especially when people crank up the air conditioners during the broiling hours after work and school. "Consumers are urged to conserve power by setting thermostats to 78 degrees or higher, if health permits, avoiding use of major appliances and turning off unnecessary lights," said the California Independent System Operator, which runs the state's power grid. Between 4:00 pm and 9:00 pm, "they should also avoid charging electric vehicles." Reducing energy use during a Flex Alert can help stabilize the power grid during tight supply conditions and prevent further emergency measures, including rotating power outages," California's power companies routinely ask households to limit their usage during the so-called "shoulder hours", when rooftop solar panels stop producing electricity but demand remains high because of where some said it was proof the state had not thought through its green agenda. In response to soaring power demands, California Governor Gavin Newsom declared a state of still-elevated temperatures. The call to limit electric vehicle charging comes a week after state regulators banned the sale of new petrol- and diesel-powered vehicles from 2035. All but a handful of SUVs, cars and light trucks will have to produce zero tailpipe emissions, with only highly efficient plug-in hybrids permitted to burn fossil fuels. The move was hailed as a game-changer for the EV industry because of the size of California's auto market and the potential it has to set national and even international standards. Wednesday's plea to conserve power was greeted with derision on Twitter, emergency that temporarily removes pollution controls on fossil fuel power plants to allow them to generate more electricity. He pointed to the punishing drought in the US West that has crippled hydroelectric plants, and noted the direct effect that climate change is having on day-to-day lives. "Energy reliability becomes more and more challenging... because demand increases at the same time supply decreases," he said. He also called on households to do their part "to help us get through the next week or so, to turn up a little bit the thermostat at home to 78 degrees."

Taiwan Shoots Down "Civilian Drone" Off China Coast Report

TAIPEI: (AGENCY)

Taiwan military on Thursday said it shot down an unidentified civilian drone, which had entered its airspace over the restricted waters of Shinyu Island, just off the Chinese coast in the early hours today. The Jimmen Defense Command of the Army stated that at 12:30 p.m. today (1), an unidentified civilian aerial camera was found to enter the airspace over the restricted waters of Shinyu Island," according to the statement released by Taiwan's Defense Ministry. "The Ministry of Defense will continue to search, monitor, and monitor closely to maintain the security of the defence area," the statement reads. A similar incident was reported on Tuesday when the Taiwanese military fired at a Chinese military drone after it entered the "restricted" airspace over a Taiwanese-controlled island. Since mid-August, a number of civilian drones have been spotted flying over the outlying island of Kinmen, 180 kilometres from Taiwan's main island but less than 10 kilometres from China. On one occasion, on August 16, two Taiwanese soldiers wearing masks reportedly threw rocks at a Chinese drone when it flew above their military post. The Kinmen Defence Command said two other Chinese drones were detected at Little Kinmen Island and nearby Lion islet on Saturday and Monday respectively. The one that passed over Lion islet at around 4 pm was flying very low, only 30 metres from the ground, it said. China has increased its antics in the Taiwan Strait since the visit of US House Speaker Nancy Pelosi. Infuriated over US Senator Marsha Blackburn's visit to Taiwan, China has last week commenced military drills in the seas and airspace around the self-governed island.

According to information released by the Taiwan region's defence authority, eight PLA Navy vessels and 35 PLA aircraft were detected around the island on August 26, with 18 of the detected aircraft (SU-30, J-11, J-16, and J-10) flying down on the east part.

16 Million Under Lockdown In Chinese City Amid New Covid Outbreak

BEIJING: (AGENCY)

Around 16 million people in the Chinese city of Chengdu will be effectively under lockdown from Thursday as authorities race to snuff out a new Covid-19 outbreak. China is the last major economy wedded to a zero-Covid policy, stamping out virus flare-ups with snap shutdowns, mass testing and lengthy quarantines. Chengdu, in the south-west, has become the latest to announce a shutdown, saying in an official notice that residents must "stay home in principle" from 6 pm on Thursday to combat a new wave of infections.

Each household will be allowed to send one person out to buy groceries and essential goods per day, provided they have tested negative in the previous 24 hours, the notice said.

It said that all residents would be tested for the virus between Thursday and Sunday, and urged them not to leave the city unless "absolutely necessary". "The current state of epidemic control is abnormal, complex and grim," the announcement said, adding that the measures aimed to "decisively arrest the spread of the outbreak and guarantee the health of all citizens".

Chengdu recorded 157 new local infections on Thursday, of which 51 displayed no symptoms, the city government said in a separate notice.

Children in at least 10 cities and provinces are facing disruption to the new academic year as pandemic controls force schools to switch to measures like online learning, according to a report on Thursday by a media outlet affiliated with the state-run People's Daily.

Xining, the capital of western Qinghai province and home to 2.5 million people, has ordered schools to conduct lessons online, rolled out a mass testing drive and told residents in its main urban area to work from home for three days.

China has stuck fast to its zero-tolerance virus strategy despite disruptions from the fast-spreading Omicron strain and concern that the approach is stifling its post-pandemic economic recovery.

Last month, travellers in its main urban area of Ohio is on life support after being stung by bees thousands of times, according to his family and local media. Austin Bellamy, 20, was in a medically induced coma Tuesday night, after he accidentally cut into a beehive while doing tree work for a friend. Fox 19, a local media outlet, reported.

Bellamy "is in the hospital, currently on a ventilator," his mother Shana Carter said on an online fundraiser page she launched to pay for his medical expenses.

On Friday, Bellamy was trimming lemon tree branches when he inadvertently cut into a hive of African killer bees and was stung more than 20,000 times, according to Carter's fundraiser statement.

"When he started cutting them (the branches), that's when the bees came out, and he tried to anchor himself down, and he couldn't," Bellamy's grandmother Phyllis Edwards told Fox 19. "He was holding, 'Help! Help me! Help!'" And his family would help him. His family watched the episode unfold from the ground but could not come to his rescue.

Rishi Sunak's Personal Note To Wife: "You Chose To Give Up High Heels"

LONDON: (AGENCY)

Rishi Sunak struck a personal note in the final hustings event before the election for a new Conservative Prime leader and British Prime Minister concludes, as he thanked his parents and wife Akshata Murty for their support.

Addressing a teeming concert venue at Wembley in London on Wednesday night, the Indian-origin former Chancellor could have been mistaken for a rockstar amid the loud cheers and screams of "Rishi, Rishi". Given the sharp contrast between his booming welcome and that of his rival, Foreign Secretary Liz Truss, it was clear that at least for this audience Sunak was the winning candidate in the race to succeed Boris Johnson.

"This final hustings is special for me because the two people who inspired me to enter public service are actually here tonight - my mum and dad," opened

Sunak, as the cameras turned to the front row where his general practitioner father Yashvir and pharmacist mother Usha were seated with his wife Akshata.

"It was their example of service and what they did for people that inspired me to enter politics. Mum, dad, thank you for always sacrificing and striving to provide a better life for your kids than you had. And thank you for teaching me that with hard work and belief and the love of your family there is no limit to what someone can achieve in our great country," he said to applause and cheers from the crowd.

Turning to his "incredible, loving, kind wife", the daughter of Infosys co-founder Narayana Murthy and author Sudha Murty, the 42-year-old Tory MP for Richmond in Yorkshire referenced their love story as students at Stanford University in the US, "You know what you mean to me, a question-and-answer round during which they fielded questions from among the nearly 6,000-strong audience of voters and political enthusiasts. "The greatest sacrifice I have made is that I have been an appalling husband and father for the past couple of years, it is as simple as that," replied Sunak to a question about his greatest regret. "I believe it will benefit millions of people, that's why I do it and I am really pleased to have their support as I," he added.

"But that's because I believe it is an enormous privilege to have these jobs. I care passionately about our country and I think I can offer something that will benefit millions of people, that's why I do it and I am really pleased to have their support as I," he added.

"I've not chosen to say the things that people may want to hear, I've said the things I believe our country needs to hear," said Sunak. "Although it hasn't made my life easy, it is honest and, for me, that is what leadership is all about," he added, reiterating his central message of fighting inflation before any tax cuts. In contrast to Truss' campaign theme of cutting taxes from day one as the new Prime Minister.
